The Nara Buddhist Sculpture Hall is in the original building of the museum, which was completed in 1894 (Meiji 27). The building has been designated an Important Cultural Property; it is seen as representative of Western-style architecture from the Meiji era (1868–1912). In this hall, now an exhibition space for statues, one can regularly view around one hundred works of Japanese sculpture, chiefly from the Asuka to Kamakura periods (or the 7th through the 14th centuries). Works from China and the Korean peninsula are on display as well. The hall is indeed a treasure trove representing not only the Buddhist sculpture of Japan, but also that of the world. We look forward to your visit to the museum for an experience of the allure and the powerful presence of the Buddhist statues preserved and exhibited here.
